Dr. Richard J. Southworth, the only son of the late Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, the celebrated novelist, died yesterday afternoon at his home, corner of 36th street and Prospect avenue, where his mother died a little ever a year ago. Dr. Southworth was married, and leaves a widow, but no children. His sister, Mrs. James Valentine Lawrence, who resides at Yonkers, N. Y., has been notified of the death, and is expected to reach the city today. Several weeks ago Dr. Southworth, who had been in poor health for some time, was forced to take his bed on account of the heat. A complication of diseases developed, which changed his condition for the worse. He was selzed with fainting spells yesterday afternoon. Dr. Robert Reyburn, the family physician, was summoned, but the patient expired before his arrival. Dr. Southworth was fifty-nine years of age, and a native of Wisconsin. He took a course of medicine, and after graduating became a hospital surgeon in the federal army. He began to practice medicine in New York city after the civil war, and then came to Washington, taking a course of law. Later he went to Yonkers, where he remained with his mother until she came here to live. The funeral will be held at 10:30 o'clock a.m. Monday, the interment being at Oak Hill cemetery, in the same grave in which the deceased's mother was placed. Rev. ALEXANDRIA AFFAIRS.

Work to Improve Confederate Monu Evening Star Bureau,

Bell Telephone No. 106,
ALEXANDRIA. Va., July 28, 1900.

The committee appointed by R. E. Lee Camp, Confederates Veterans, to superintend the proposed improvements at the confederate monument, corner of Prince and Washington streets, held a meeting last night and determined upon plans for an early beginning of the work. Charts for the new plot around the base of the statue have been drawn, and bids will be considered at an early date. A symmetrically arranged grass plot will surround the monument, to be about sixty feet through one direction and forty-six in the other. This will be inclosed by a granite curbing of wide base. At the four right angled corners of the figure there will be pedestals on which lamps will probably be placed. There will be other pedestals on the curbing, but it has not yet been determined what they will support. It is likely, however, that these will be adorned with some memorial to the confederate dead. Outside of the curbing the street for a distance of several feet on every side will be paved with vitrified brick. It is the purpose of the committee to make improvements appropriate to the handsome statue, and the work will doubtless result in the most beautiful public spot in Alexandria.

CHANGES OF TIME.

Impressions of Southern Montgomery Written for The Evening Star.

So rapid has been the flight of time tha one can scarcely realize the fact that nearpresent writer became the rector of what parish in Montgomery county, Md. This stretches away from the Patuxent river on an average depth of eight or ten miles Columbia lines, embracing an area of over 160 square miles. With its beautiful larger water courses of the Paint branch, the Northwest, Sligo and Rock creek, with their lovely little valleys and the picturesque hill and dale country interjacent, it is greatly doubted whether any city in the Union, not excepting even Philadelphia and Cincinnati, with Clifton and the Walnut Hills, is more fortunate than Washington city in its northern and northwestern outlaying country. Thirty years ago it was wholly undewater courses of the Paint branch, the Georgetown and Rockville pike, with such country roads as were a terror in winter time to the farmer, and both a terror and a torture to the pleasure seeker alike in winter and summer, and this because they were ungraded and very rough. Now the Baltimore and Ohio railroad has multiplied its trains with double track and convenient depots, while the electric lines have made a large portion of this section a charming suburb to the only truly cosmopolitan city in this continental republic. Coming back to this section after a long, long absence, the very improved condition of the roads, the higher standards of a mixed husbandry, the increased fertility of the soil, the large barns, the commodious homesteads, with beautiful grounds; the large herds of improved cattle, the flocks of sheep, in many cases the payment of the mortgages; these are among the changes which speak volumes of the betterment of the people. Within the past two weeks the present writer has mingled freely with these people, and, while he notes saddening changes in the withdrawal by death of prominent citizens, such as Montgomery Blair, Admiral S. P. Lee, Joseph H. Bradley, Hugh McCulloch, Charles Abert and Drs. James H. Davidson and Josiah Harding, with that sweet-hearted old Irish gentleman, Thos. Y. Conley, there are many, many features in the present condition of these dear people both to encourage and enhearten them in their present and future relations to life and its duties.

As indicative of the rapid growth of the southern I rition of Montgon. Ty county, it may be stilled that where the present writer was the only clergyman of the Episcopal Church, and where he gave the flower of the people, largely increased in numbers, the places of merchandise have multiplied, while the government has thoughtfully provided post offices, while private enterprise has furnished telephone and express facilities: At Forest Glen a large institution for female education, abreast of the needs of the nineteenth century civilization, has been developed, while near

Thus gladly do we note that the quick pulses of social, moral and civil life, so strikingly characterizing this blessed young republic of ours, indicate such conditions as to make this section equal in many respects to many, if not all, of our favored land. With best wishes for continued health and happiness for the dear people in his old parish, from whom he has received so many tokens of affection in his old age, during his late visit from house to house, where he finds many, many readers of The Star, the old country parson writes himself very faithfully,

THE LOGAN STATUE.

On Vice Consul Wood's Recommenda-tion It Will Be Accepted.

On the recommendation of Col. Bingham, corps of engineers, in charge of public buildings and grounds, the Secretary of War has appointed Mr. Wood, United States vice consul at Rome, an agent of the United States to inspect the equestrian statue of Gen. Logan made in Rome by Mr. Franklin Simmons, an American sculptor, and intended for erection in Iowa Circle in this city. Mr. Wood is a gentleman of considerable artistic taste and ability, and if he is satisfied with the statue it will be accepted by the government and shipped to the United States at the expense of the sculptor. Mr. Simmons has informed Col. Bingham that he expects to have the statue in Washington by the lst of December next. The pedestal for the statue, a handsome bronze affair of rare artistic merit and beauty, is already in position in Iowa Circle. It has attracted considerable attention and favorable comment.

Vice Consul Wood performed the same service in Rome with respect to the pedes-tal that he is now called upon to perform with respect to the statue.
